Report of the School Committee.

In presenting our Report of the schools for the past year, we would say, they have generally been profitable. The measure of advancement has varied according to the intellectual qualifications of the teachers, and their experience in the work; the condition of the school houses, and the interest felt by parents and scholars. Where all these requisites to a prosperous school are found, we may confidently look for corresponding results; but if one wheel in the machine is wanting, we must expect confusion.

It will hence appear, that it is no easy work for your Committee to secure by their labors that advancement in popular education that is expected of them by virtue of their office, and which they aim to secure. In one case, the house is wholly unfit for school purposes. No teacher, however well qualified, can carry forward a school in such a house with success. Another teacher in a good house, may lack experience, and tact in teaching, or government, and so there is but little progress there. Again, in another school, there is great want of punctuality, and regularity in the attendance of the scholars. In another, parents neglect to furnish their children the needful books, or take any interest in the improvement of their children. And in another case, as one teacher reports, "political influence has a bad effect on the school."

Such are some of the hindrances to the advancement of our schools; and by reason of the operation of these causes, the office and labors of the Superintending Committee are said to be needless. But the duty of the Committee is, to superintend the working of such machinery as is put under their care. If, therefore, those who have difficult parts to perform in the working of it, either neglect their duty, or so perform it as to produce friction, let the responsibility be on them, where it belongs.

With regard to books used, we have made no changes except in relation to the spelling book. This change seemed desirable inasmuch as the old book had been in use about ten years. As the Progressive Speller, prepared by the authors who compiled the series of readers introduced last year, was offered us for introduction at a handsome discount from the retail price, we felt that the time had come for a change to be made.

We have directed the teachers to give particular prominence to the elementary principles of reading, spelling, and pronunciation. Many of the schools have afforded pleasing evidence of patient and successful training in this respect.

We also instructed the teachers to require of those scholars studying Grammar, an original composition to be read in connection with the class exercises from week to week, and made the exercise for parsing by the class.

Two objects would be thus secured. First, the scholar would learn to put his own thoughts on paper in the form of a composition; and secondly, would learn to correct his own errors in spelling, and grammar, by parsing his own composition. Some of the teachers carried this method into effect with manifest advantage to their pupils, while others suffered it to fail.

In nearly all the school houses there is an entire absence of anything like school apparatus or outline maps. There is but one clock, and not a single thermometer, in all the school houses in town. Black boards in many cases are the merest apologies. A small sum appropriated either by the town, or by the districts, to furnish these things, would be of material benefit to the schools.

In this connection the Committee would say, Mr. J. R. Dodge, of Nashua, the publisher of the latest map of the state of New Hampshire, offers to furnish maps for school rooms at $1.50 each; and a key (to accompany it if wanted) containing much valuable information upon the statistics and geography of the State, at an additional cost of only three or four cents. Scholars can thus gain a large amount of knowledge at a very trifling expense. We regard the proposition as worthy of consideration.

The condition of the school houses, and changes in relation to school districts, have been so often urged upon your attention that we deem it of little use to repeat what has been said. We therefore let that subject pass, with the expectation that you will still permit the old nuisances to remain, and throw away your money upon schools attempted to be kept in them. The progress made in the different schools will appear from the several district reports in their order.

The different degrees of success attending the labors of the various teachers, and the influence which party feeling has had in some districts, shows, that no small amount of responsibility rests on prudential, as well as Superintending Committees. And what is it but perversion and abuse when the school money of a district is used for party purposes, or to aid family relatives, rather than promote the education of our youth?

District Report.

No. 1. Mr. Clarke Haynes, Prudential Committee. Miss Horatia A. Elliot teacher of Summer Term. The first school. Not very efficient, but, considering her experience, succeeded tolerably well. Winter Term by J. H. Smart, and first school. This young man entered upon his duty with energy and enthusiasm; thoroughly taught in all departments, and was unusually successful. The school made great progress. A wide awake teacher makes corresponding scholars.

No. 2. R. G. L. Bartlett, Prud. Com. Summer and Winter Terms, by Miss Hatlie Johnson. Governs her school with moderation, kindness and firmness. A careful and accurate teacher, as well as highly practical and successful. A difficult school, but good improvement, especially during the first term.

No. 3.

No. 4. Joseph Hill, Prud. Com. Summer, by Miss Annette Hancock. Opening of school favorable; closing examination very good. Winter, by Mr. Solon P. Hill. By misunderstanding were not notified of its close, and so did not visit.

No. 5. Ebenezer Burleigh Prud. Com; teacher, Summer and Winter, Miss Sarah J. Burleigh. Good progress in reading and grammar and good order in the first term. The last term commenced well, but it closed sooner than we were notified, and so, not visiting at the close, are unable to say what progress was made, but from the first, concluded, good. She needs to give a little more zest to her school.

No. 6. Nathaniel Piper, Prud. Com. Miss Jennie Piper, teacher. Summer and Winter. Somewhat moderate, but a good instructor. Her first schools. Will improve by practice. Classes in Arithmetic and Grammar advanced well.

No. 7. Reuben P. Sanborn, Prud. Com. Miss Ruth Ann Hill taught the Summer school. Desires to succeed and tries, but there were but very few scholars at the close of the term. Winter Term by Miss Sarah F. Com. Good, and progress was evident in reading and spelling. Little things were attended to and it was a profitable school.

No. 8. Abel W. Brown, Prud. Com. Miss Mary E. Brown taught in Summer. Lacks tact. Careless in regard to spelling. A general deficiency. Considered a failure. Mr. Abram Brown, Winter Term. Good order, and the whole school managed well and good improvement.

No. 9. Kendrick Abrams, Prud. Com. Summer, by Mrs. Mary A. Shaw. Deficient in the elements and tact. Reading poor and scholars neglected. Winter, by Miss Morgiana Fowler. Good appearance at the beginning, but close sooner than we were notified and did not visit at the close. Several in the district inform us that she gave good satisfaction.

No. 10. Joseph Wiggan, Prud. Com. One term, by Miss Nancy T. Norris. Order good. Grammar class made good progress, arithmetic not as good. Large scholars unmannerly, and one, decidedly bad boy. Teacher did as well as circumstances would favor.

No. 11. Wm. D. Mason, Prud. Com. Summer, by Miss Sarah B. Colby. Much improvement upon last year. A good school. Winter, commenced by Mr. — Eaton, taught one week and left. Mr. — Smith took his place and commenced well, but left before the money was expended. Leaving earlier than we were told, we had not an opportunity to examine the school at the leave-off. We are inclined to think that not the best possible good was derived from the expenditure of the money. Register not returned.

No. 12. Alpheus Weeks, Esq., Prud. Com. Summer, by Miss Eliza Weeks. The school was nearly a failure for want of patronage. Her first school. Will do better out of her own district, and with more scholars. Winter, Mr. Daniel S. Piper. Good order. Scholars still, easy and studious. Teacher little old fashioned, but made good home-spun work. It will wear well.

No. 13. Jesse Sanborn, Prud. Com. Teacher, Summer and Winter, Miss Lura Durgin, who fully sustained her former reputation as a superior teacher.

No. 14. Emerson Giles, Prud. Com. Mr. A. G. Hanson, teacher. Only one term. Lacks energy and enthusiasm, but considered his school of fair character as there was medium progress in the branches studied.

No. 15. Frederic Colby, Prud. Com. Miss S. Emily Taylor, teacher both terms and gave good satisfaction. One that can keep a good school in the old-shell-of-a-school-house like that in this district possesses not a modicum of teacher-skill. This she did and improved upon last year.

No. 16. Rev. Otis G. Smith, Prud. Com. Both terms by Miss Eliza A. Sinclair, an experienced teacher, whose pupils made good proficiency in all branches.

No. 17. Samuel S. Hersey, Prud. Com. and Miss Sarah Colby, teacher. Only one term. Sustains herself well. Her scholars progressed.

No. 18. John T. Durgin, Prud. Com. and Miss Lura Durgin teacher both terms Good.

No. 19. H. Q. Dalton, Prud. Com. Miss Fanny D. Pearson taught the first term. Some progress. Deficient in order and lacking in energy. Winter, by Mr. A. Y. Hanson. Excelled in reading, commendable progress in other branches, although there was much noise, whispering and loud study. Discipline very poor.

No. 20. David Smith, Prud. Com. Summer, Miss Martha M. Woodman teacher. Observed the little things that add much to the interest of a school, which with good regulation gave much success. Good progress, good school. Winter, Mr. Charles E. Lane, who understands his business, does his duty and prospers.

No. 21. Thomas Mason, Prud. Com. Mr. Freeman D. Gilman teacher. One term only. Progress very small. Order poor.

No. 22. Charles C. Taylor, Prud. Com. S. Emily Huse, teacher both terms. Small and backward school. Order good, progress small. Only four scholars present when visited at the close.

No. 23. One term, by Miss Oriette Whidden. Jonathan P. Sanborn, Prud. Com. School improved much in manners and general appearance and made fair progress in studies.

No. 24. Miss S. Emily Taylor, teacher. Cyrus K. Lane, Prud. Com. School dull and not any too respectful. Teacher toiled hard and fair improvement was made. Scholars are not inclined to injure their health by study.

No. 25. Miss Narcissa Dearborn, teacher, and J. W. Moses, Prud. Com. Considering that hogs and pigs were sometimes running around the school house, offering their dignified approbation or disapprobation in their guttural or squeal, it is almost marvellous how the "young idea" could be abstracted enough from these animals to give attention to the lessons assigned. But it was achieved. There was good order and excellent improvement. There was superior progress in reading.

Nos. 26-7.

No. 28. Joseph L. Conner, Prud. Com. Miss Clara J. Conner, teacher. It is almost impossible to fix the eyes and minds of pupils upon their books in such a place as the one where this school is inconvened. The teacher did something towards it, but would have succeeded better in a better school room. No school will ever be worth much there. A superior teacher would succeed but ordinarily in such a place.

No. 29. J. K. Clough, Prud. Com. Miss Alice M. Randlet, teacher. A young and inexperienced teacher, a small school and small progress.
